

LitLive! and the Doshi Foundation

"This is a very special event because with it we begin collaboration with the Vinod & Saryu Doshi Foundation. Hopefully, it will be a long lasting association because the aims and objectives of the Foundation and Literature Live! are the same promotion of literature and culture in its myriad forms," it was Anil Dharker, indefatigable founder of Literature Live! informing us of his venture's latest tie up.

"Everyone knows how deeply the Doshis have been involved in culture in all its aspects. Saryu of course was trained for it, but Vinod was an industrialist by inheritance and a culturalist by inclination." "So when Maitreya got in touch with us for a tie up it was a marriage of true minds to which who would bring an impediment?" said Dharker.

"We plan to do literary evenings once a month or so, and our first one is with a certain Mr Vir Sanghvi next week," said our friend, adding tongue-in-cheek, "perhaps you might know him?"

School's in

Visitors to the hallowed interiors of Bombay House, that bastion of the Tata's conglomerate, are prone to remark about the delightful change in the overall vibe brought in by the relatively young current Chairman Cyrus Mistry. What's more, according to an insider, the august boardroom chatter has taken a decidedly youthful turn.
